Alfred Hitchcocks Fatal Attractions

Elana Lore

Alfred Hitchcock's Fatal Attractions, edited by Elana Lore, is a collection of twenty-five tales of mystery, murder, and suspense, selected from the archives of Alfred Hitchcock's Mystery Magazine. The stories are an anthology of Hitchcockian films, which were the inspiration for Alfred Hitchcock's movie. The collection presents an anthology of twenty-five tales of mystery, murder, and suspense, selected from the archives of Alfred Hitchcock's Mystery Magazine. It includes stories by the Master of Suspense, Alfred Hitchcock, and other notable authors. The book is a tribute to the legacy of Hitchcock's influence on the horror and thriller genres, and its aesthetic is similar to those of Hitchcock up to his time. It is a must-read for fans of Hitchcock and mystery literature.